"Hi, I'm Charlie! I'm a Clownfish! I live in coral reefs off the coasts of Australia and Southeast Asia."

I live in sea anemones with all my other clownfish friends. Anemones are creatures that anchor themselves to the seafloor and use their tentacles to catch food. Their tentacles have stinging cells, so if you touch them they can hurt. But they don't hurt me because when I was younger I developed a mucus build-up around my body that protects me. Although I'm not endangered like some of my other marine life friends, almost half of coral reefs have disappeared or been damaged! That is not good because that is where my family and many other families live.

Why is this happening?

- Pollution
- Disease
- Over-fishing
- Bleaching caused by rising ocean temp.

What can you do to help?

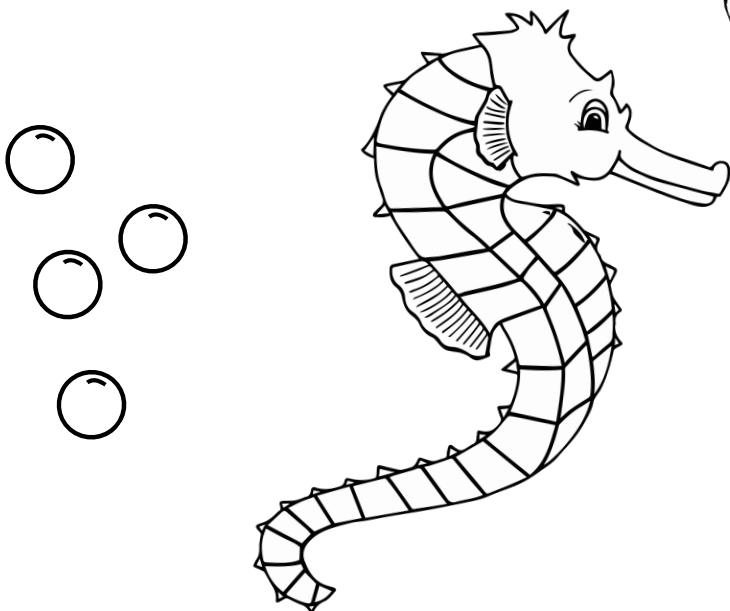

The best thing you can do to help save our homes is to learn all you can about the ocean! The ocean is a beautiful world full of life and wonder. But unfortunately, not many people want to take care of it. When you grow up you can take all you know and help us as your job! How cool would that be?

The Adventure Continues!

Scuba Rangers is a camp program that can help kids explore their underwater curiosity and give them valuable lifelong skills too. Best of all, it's so focused on fun, they won't even realize they're learning so much in the process! Kids can join starting at 8 years old.
